

ELDER LAW ATTORNEYS

Candace Dellacona

Knowledge, Compassion, And Planning

Understanding elder law begins with realizing that someone you care about – your spouse, parent, an elderly relative, or even yourself – is aging or in physical or cognitive decline. While contemplating disability or death is never pleasant, ignoring the mortality facts until a major life event forces the issue is often far worse.

Planning may make all the difference between peace and turmoil. Embracing pre-crisis planning over post-crisis management is the cornerstone of Offit Kurman's elder law approach. Working closely with clients, our experienced elder law attorneys evaluate the situation, analyze the facts and help clients address potentially life-changing issues:

- How to protect assets from potential nursing home costs
- What is Medicaid/Medical Assistance and how to qualify
- How to afford to pay for long-term care costs
- Who will make decisions when the client cannot?
- How to ensure that assets will be distributed appropriately at the time of death
- Where to begin

With understanding and compassion, the elder law attorneys at Offit Kurman Attorneys at Law are by your side every step of the way, ready to assist you and your families, and present options on how best to deal with the long-term financial and medical realities unique to each situation.

Throughout our relationship, we focus on delivering the right information and resources to help bring clarity to the process of elder law planning.
